What ideas individuals may attach to the term "Millennium" I know not; but I know that society may be formed so as to exist without crime, without poverty, with health greatly improved, with little, if any misery, and with intelligence and happiness increased a hundredfold"
Robert Owen's address to the inhabitants of New Lanark, New Year's Day, 1816

NEW LANARK WORLD HERITAGE SITE

David Dale
1739 - 1806

Over 200 years ago the impressive sandstone cotton mills of New Lanark were built by an enterprising Scot, David Dale, in a dramatic gorge in Southern Scotland, close to the famous Falls of Clyde. Soon the village became known all over the world under the enlightened management of Dale's son-in-law, the social pioneer, Robert Owen. In an age of cruel mill managers and 'dark, satanic mills' he provided decent homes, fair wages, free health care and a new education system for villagers, which included the first nursery school in the world.

Today, as you wander around the village and surrounding Wildlife Reserve, it is easy to imagine how people lived and worked in Owen's day.

New Lanark has been carefully restored as a living community, and visitors are welcome to explore the fascinating history of the village in the award-winning Visitor Centre, or stay overnight in the New Lanark Mill Hotel and self-catering cottages. Exciting family attractions bring the story of New Lanark and its people to life for everyone to enjoy. As in Owen's time, the name New Lanark is spreading around the world and it is now a UNESCO World Heritage Site.
