 Making it work together

"What ideas individuals may attach to the term "Millennium" I know not but I know that society may be formed so as to exist without crime, without poverty, with health greatly improved, with little, if any misery, and with intelligence and happiness increased a hundredfold; and no obstacle whatsoever intervenes at this moment except ignorance to prevent such a state of society from becoming universal"
 Robert Owen's Address to the Inhabitants of New Lanark, New Year's Day 1816.

NEW LANARK WORLD HERITAGE SITE

Over 200 years ago the beautiful sandstone cotton mills of New Lanark were founded in a dramatic gorge in Southern Scotland, close to the famous Falls of Clyde. Soon the village became known all over the world because of the work of mill owner and social pioneer Robert Owen. In an age of cruel mill managers and 'dark, satanic mills', he provided decent homes, fair wages, free health care and a new education system for villagers, which included the first nursery school in the world.

Today, as you wander around the village and surrounding Wildlife Reserve, it is easy to imagine how people lived and worked in Owen's day. New Lanark has been carefully restored as a living, working community, where visitors are welcome to explore the fascinating history of the village in the award-winning Visitor Centre, or stay overnight in the New Lanark Mill Hotel and self-catering cottages. Exciting family attractions bring the story of New Lanark and Robert Owen to life for everyone to enjoy, and as in Owen's time, the name of New Lanark is spreading around the world. In December 2001 the village became an official UNESCO World Heritage Site.
